Rethinking Wealth

An Introduction to Faith-Based Investing
Frequently Asked Questions

Is there a uniform standard for defining faith-based investing and how it is implemented across the industry?

No. In addition to varying motivations for their investment choices, every fund company also has a different method of implementing their faith-based beliefs. For example, GuideStone’s unique, multifaceted approach to faith-based investing was specifically created to support the sanctity of life, family, stewardship, health and safety. It is implemented within our mutual funds via our exclusionary screening, shareholder advocacy and impact investing efforts.

What about the performance of faith-based funds relative to the industry?

At GuideStone, we are incentivized to exceed Non-Socially Responsible Investing/Environmental, Social and Governance (ESG) benchmarks and peer group performance regardless of our exclusionary screen. Since the inception of our Funds in 2001, there has not been a material long-term positive/negative impact to performance due to our screening process, nor do we foresee that being a factor moving forward.

Is GuideStone’s exclusionary screen detrimental to investment returns?

While there is evidence to support each side of this industry-wide debate, GuideStone believes that long-term investment returns have not been materially affected by our exclusionary screen. In fact, based on our Funds’ performance and industry recognition, we believe that GuideStone offers a competitive family of mutual funds that gives investors the opportunity to participate in performance-driven, values-based investments.

How is the exclusionary screen implemented?

We utilize a wide range of resources in our research efforts — regulatory filings, financial statements and advertising, to name a few — to determine the public perception of a specific company. Moreover, we leverage external research applications such as MSCI ESG Manager and Institutional Shareholder Services (ISS) Governance DataDesk, as well as Bloomberg, to gain a deeper understanding of a given company’s business. From this research, GuideStone develops and maintains a list of restricted companies whose securities cannot be purchased within GuideStone Funds®. The Restricted Issuers List is distributed to the sub-advisers of each Fund and other investment service providers for the effective application of the exclusionary screen.

How is your investment universe impacted by your exclusionary screen?

As of June 30, 2023, GuideStone’s Restricted Issuers List typically ranges between:
• 3%–5% of the S&P 500® Index market capitalization
• 6%–10% of the MSCI EAFE Index market capitalization
• 1%–2% of the Bloomberg US Aggregate Bond Index

The Funds may experience negative performance, and past performance does not guarantee future results.
Does exclusionary screening mean I have to pay high fees?

When broken out into their respective Morningstar categories, the net expense ratios for GuideStone Funds are competitive with, and oftentimes lower than, those of the average screened mutual fund. Furthermore, many of the GuideStone Funds’ net expense ratios compare favorably to those of the full Morningstar category averages – which include both screened and non-screened funds.

What if GuideStone holds a company in a respective fund that I find to be objectionable and the security is not screened out?

A perfect company does not exist. The intent behind GuideStone’s exclusionary screen is to avoid participating in the profits of companies we find to be objectionable. But we also believe it is important not to remain complacent when we receive feedback from our investors, which is why we focus on shareholder advocacy to promote change and be the voice for fellow believers.

What if some of your screens are not important to me?

While we hope all investors see the value and intentionality in the screens we implement, we certainly understand that some issues may be more or less important to different investors. However, like other mutual funds, there is an inherent lack of customization regarding the implementation of our exclusionary screen.
